Key market transition phase

In the past

Wide opportunities

Today

Return to be achieved through an accurate selection process

The «zero yield» scenario

Low risk is equivalent to «zero return» today

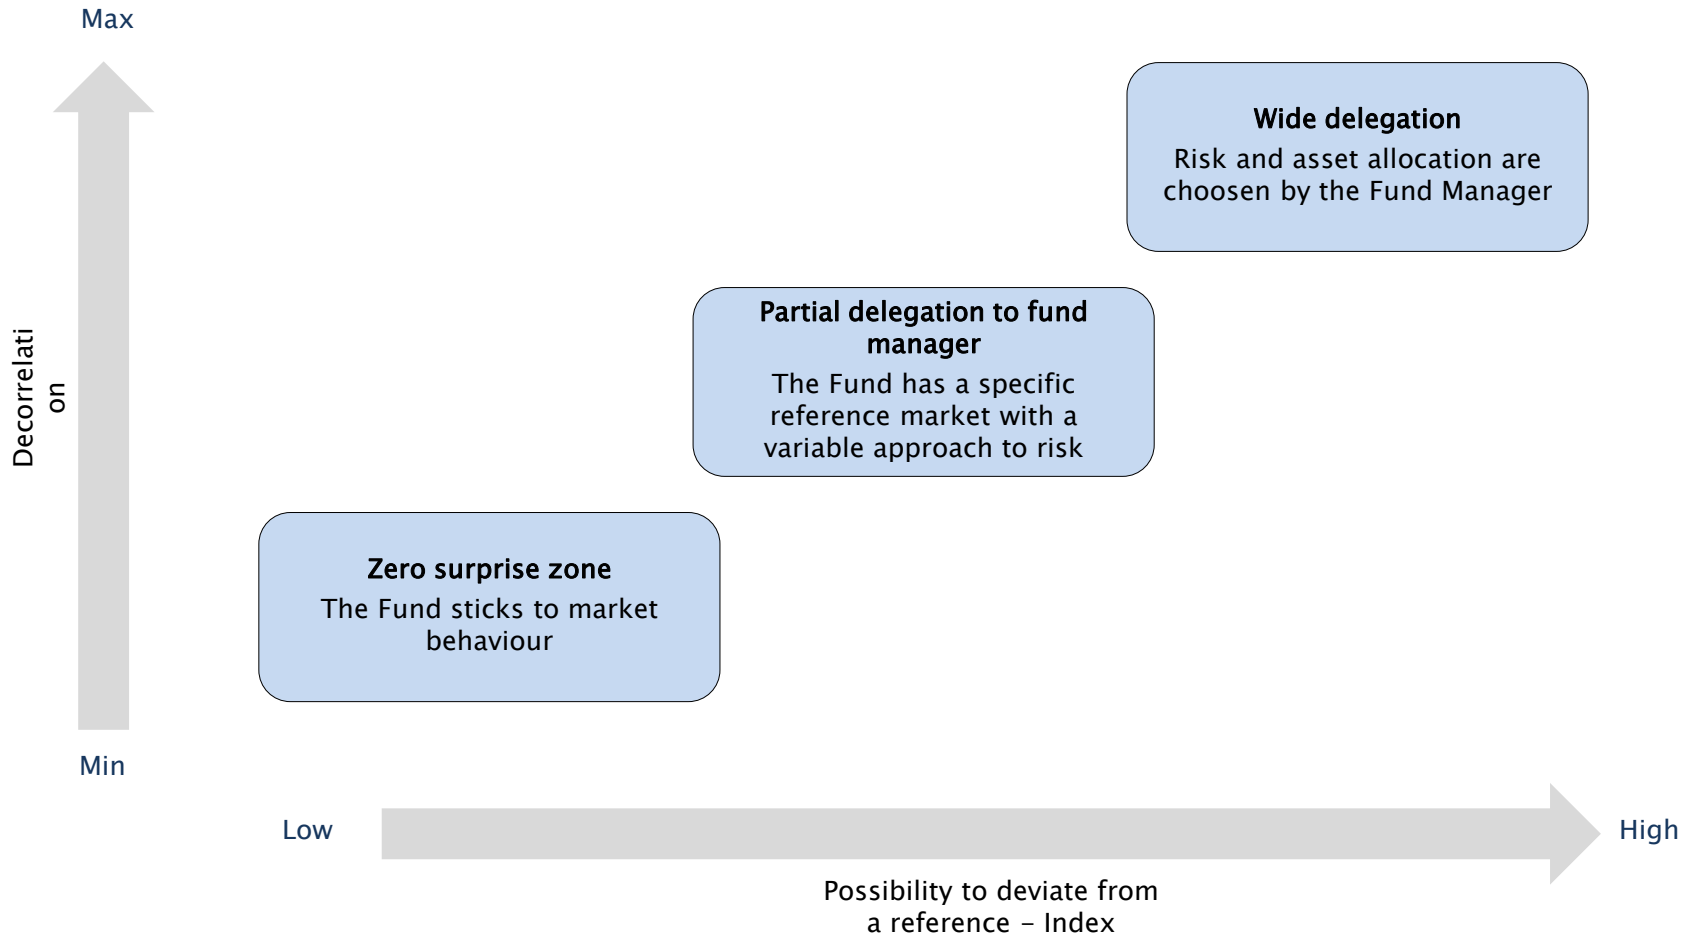

- › No more «free lunch» over the govies curve; some years ago you would have got 2% – 3% on the European govies curve
- › Today no more yield around the «risk free»; you could pay management fees higher than expected returns

Re-arranging asset allocation is key

- › OPTION 1: Direct «timing» on the asset class
- › OPTION 2: Modify portfolio with a more «flexible approach»

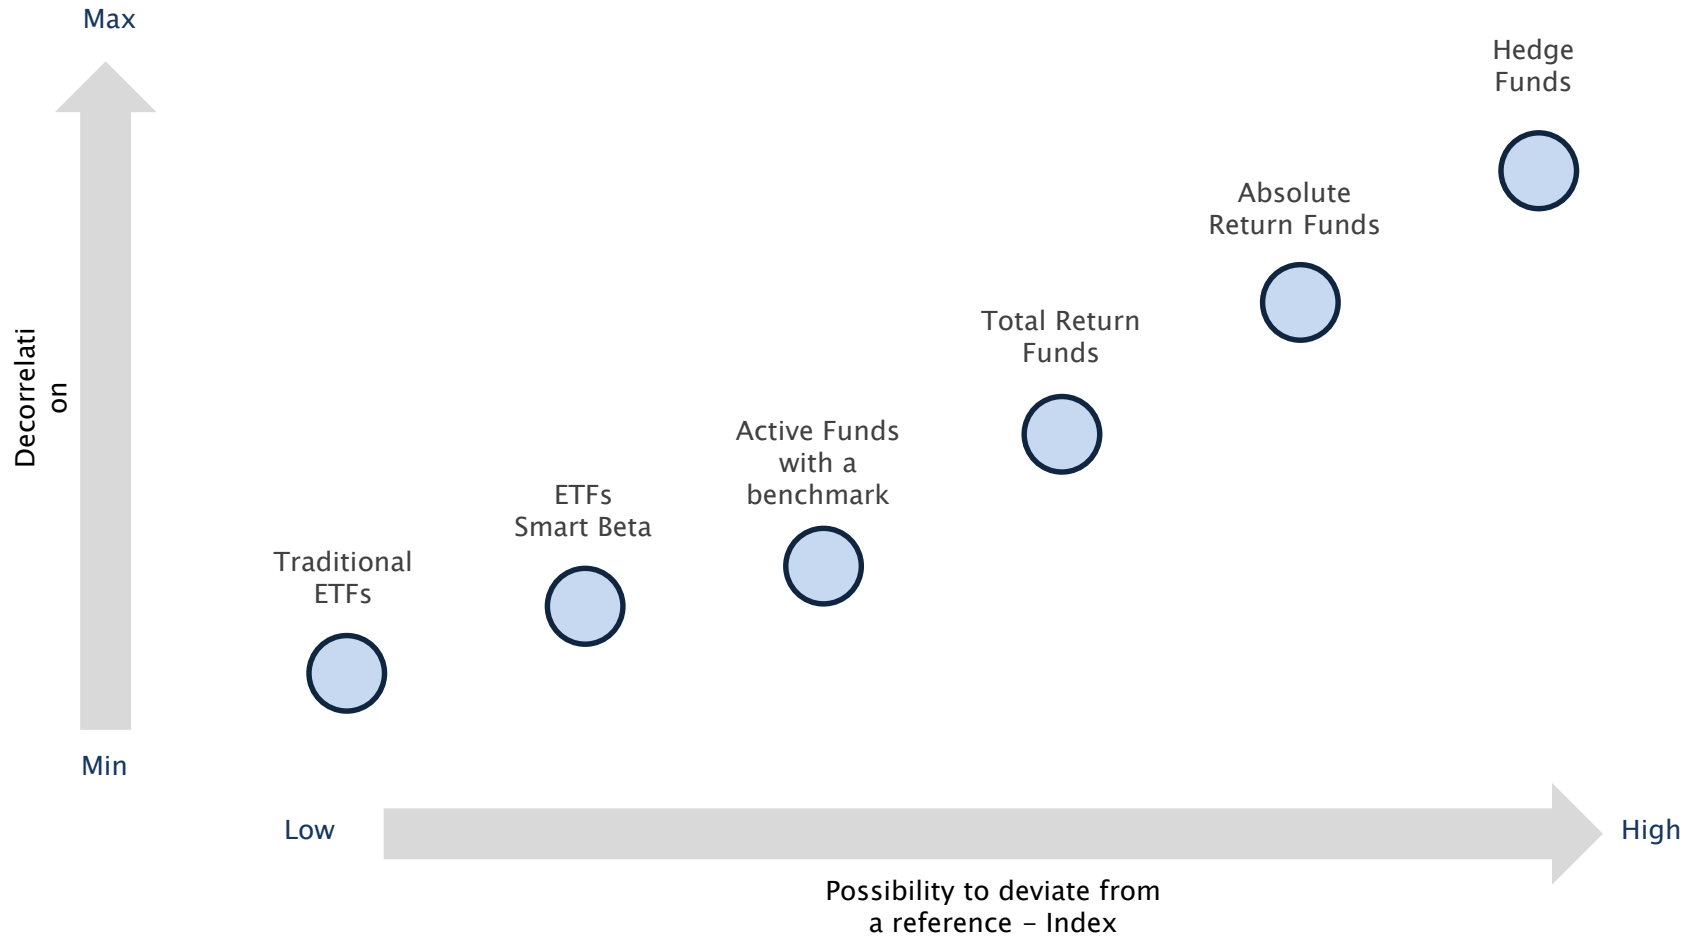

Fund profile selection: implications

Fund profiles based on the level of delegation

Key evaluation factors based upon Fund profile

Active Funds with a benchmark

- › Active risk:
keep low (Tracking Error)
- › Return:
should beat the benchmark depending on active risk (Informatio Ratio)
- › Management fee:
keep low

Funds without a benchmark

- › Efficiency:
maximization of return for risk (Sharpe Ratio)
- › Correlation:
low dependence on pure market risk
- › Risk:
capital protection during crises (limited maximum drawdown)

Absolute Return

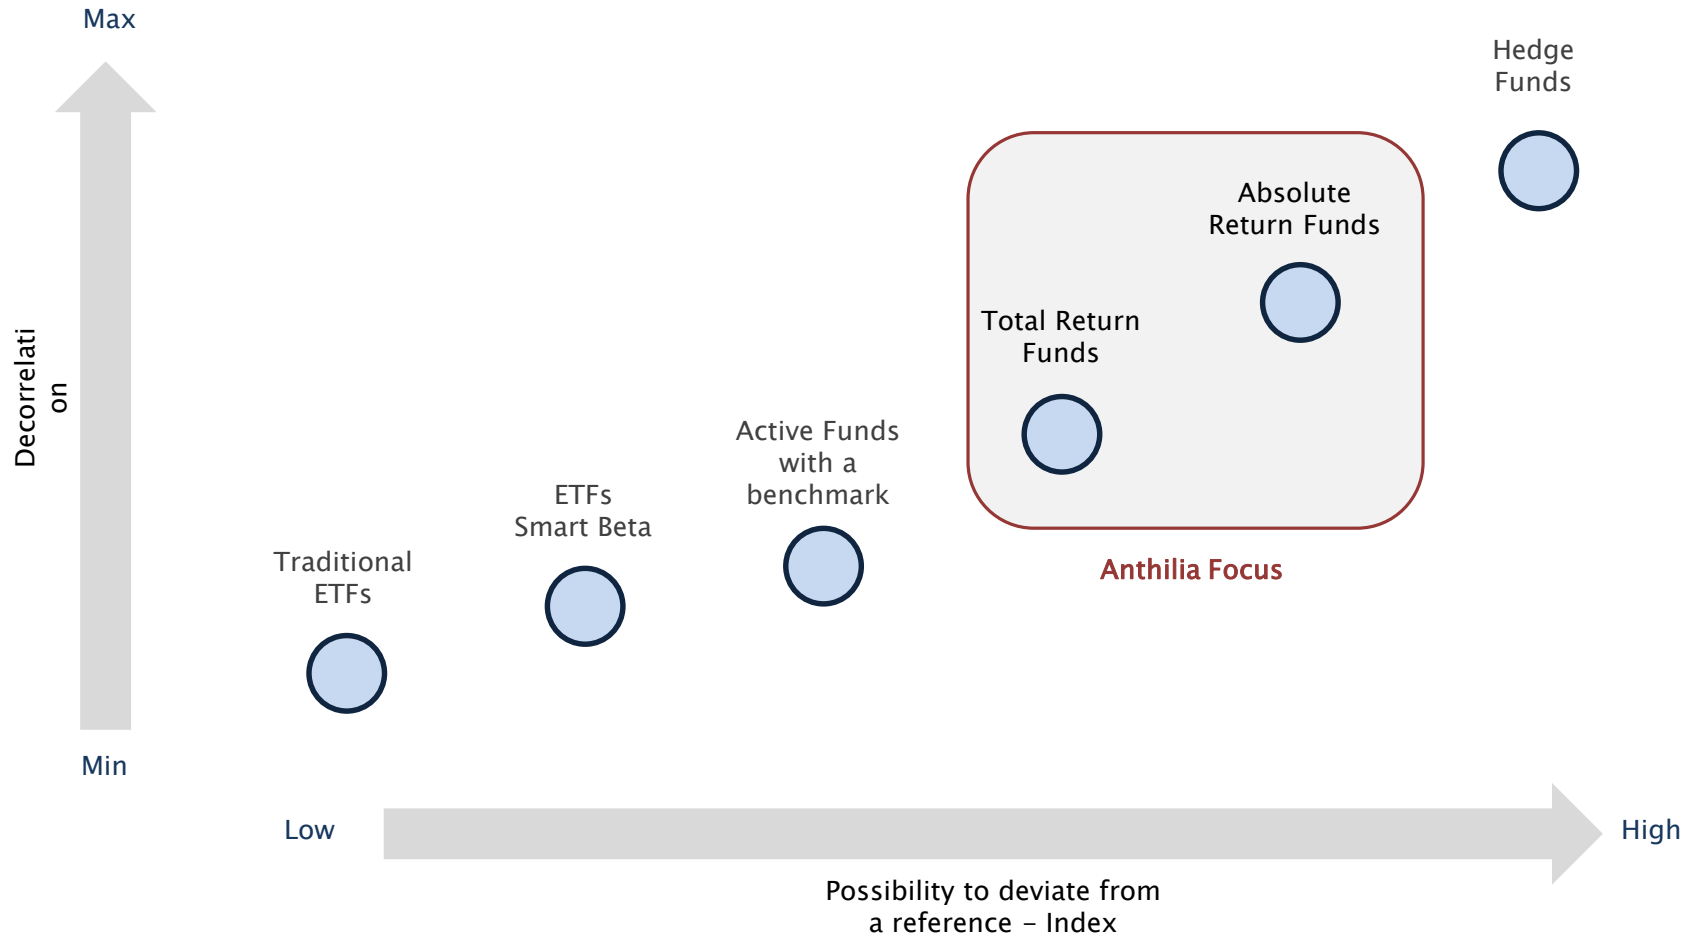

Anthilia Strategies

Anthilia funds: focus on Total Return and Absolute Return products

Expected benefits

Total Return products

- › Optimal return / risk profile over a pre-defined asset class
- › Positive market bias: high participation on bull markets and capital protection over crises
- › Capital protection (no excessive maximum drawdown)
- › Dynamic portfolio without «market timing» needs during downturns

Absolute Return Products

- › Performance with no market correlation
- › Bias on investment efficiency (return per unit of risk)
- › Strategy diversification (qualitative, quantitative, top down, bottom-up)
- › Insurance over prolonged market crises
